We could not fulfill our mission without the endless commitment of individual and workplace volunteers who give their time and talents to serve seniors.

WORKPLACE TEAM ROLES

Delivering meals is a great team-building opportunity that only requires a group of two or more individuals to get started. We have teams that have been delivering for decades.

“Delivering for Meals On Wheels is not only rewarding, but is a team building exercise for the Kerry team. Volunteering allows us to connect with our coworkers in a different setting; fostering relationships and increasing collaboration while helping our home-bound community.”—Kelly Fruin

"This wonderful opportunity has allowed the SENB Bank Beloit Banking Center team to become stronger in our community, both professionally and personally."—Michielle Schaefer

TEAM LEADER

The team leader will be the main point of contact and is responsible for maintaining the volunteer schedule. The team leader acts as a liaison between your organization and the Beloit Meals On Wheels staff.

DELIVERY TEAM

At least one member of your delivery team is required on your designated delivery day. It is good to have a team so another team member can step up and sub for someone who cannot deliver. Most teams deliver meals with two people.
